

Crowdsourcing in investigative journalism

Global investigative journalism conference in Kiev 13-16 October 2011

Nils Mulvad nils.mulvad@kaasogmulvad.dk

See these descriptions:

- Crowdsourcing Investigative Journalism

Presentation at the VVOJ (Dutch-Flemish investigative journalism organisation) conference 2010, Ghent, Belgium.

- Crowdsourcing in investigative journalism

4 Apr 2011 – [This is the first of a new GIJN feature on investigative techniques.] By Nils Mulvad
Crowdsourcing is normally regarded as defined in 2006. ...

- Where is Gary

A net-documentation of an investigation

This is not moving fast. Best for more broad investigative stories. Very rare to think of use in investigating organized crime.

More experience on how to get people involved and build communities round investigations is needed.

New trend: Be part of the stream. Gather the stream from social media while things are going on.

Look here:

- New methods for covering events and investigative journalism melt together